OpenForum is an initial framework for page level integrated forums. It's not intended to be a fully-featured forum application but rather a simple and efficient forum base. The main functional difference between OpenForum and other classical forums is the integration. You can display the forum in any of your existing asp pages with a single call. OpenForum will preserve the existing querystring of the url if there is any. OpenForum also has different color schemes you can choose from using the Web-Based Administration. If enabled, users can also receive email notifications of new posts. (Compatible with ASP Mail, JMail, and CDONTS)
