This script is useful for keeping track of log files on your website without having to actually go to the site to check them. It is set up to run only once a day, between midnight and a time that you specify, and must be triggered by another script (like a counter or other cgi tracking script). Features include: Read a list of log files and send them to you over email, You can choose to receive one email, or each file mailed separately, The script can optionally back up each of the files to a single location of choice, The script can optionally reset each of the files (clearing them).
