As a full-featured, browser-based, out-of- the box, Web publishing and dynamic content management solution, CommonSpot Content Server allows end users to easily participate in the efficient creation, management and delivery of Web content, without the help of a Webmaster. CommonSpot's flexible template and data-driven architecture, granular access controls and a multi-level approval workflow process, give content managers control over the integrity and structure of the site, while greatly simplifying overall content management. Developers appreciate CommonSpot's open and extensible architecture, enabling fast and seamless integration with existing Cold Fusion applications and custom modules.
