CSS AutoLoad processes the @import keyword server-side instead of client-side. In this manner, website authors can easily create and load a CSS framework into all pages with a single stylesheet include, no matter how many .css files are in use. In English: You can use as many stylesheets as you want without having to include each one in your HTML document and without creating extra HTTP requests. Also, compression of the aggregate file save bandwidth by shrinking the size of the aggregated file. Installation takes a matter of seconds and requires no changes to your existing CSS code.
