If you have downloads available on your website, implementing a delayed download can be great nu-intrusive way to give your visitors what they are looking for (the download) while also giving your advertisers a few seconds of extra face-time. This script will give the user a second-by-second countdown letting them know exactly how much longer they have to wait for their download to start. This is a great time for you to display some targeted advertising to them while you have their full attention.
