Extensible Editor for Website is a web content management tool that allows you to organize web pages into menu items, insert images, build lists, and add links and text. It doesn't require a database. It handles page-selected event and HTML-based pop-up menus. The editor can be installed to support the web site as a whole data structure or as a site independent section. It was designed to help non-technical people to create and maintain the website content online. The web editor itself is a collection of XSLT stylesheets developed to manage the pre-defined XML document that describes the content of the site.
