LifeType (formerly known as pLog) is an open-source blogging platform with enticing features for both big blogging communities and casual bloggers alike. LifeType is multi-blog and multi-user out of the box, and end users will enjoy its friendly user interface, the generation of clean XHTML code and the powerful file management area for managing resources and attaching them to our posts. Other exciting features include a customizable template system with caching support, native support for subdomains with custom URLs, a powerful plugin framework, fully localizable from the ground up, generation and syndication of RSS feeds, support trackbacks and the metaWeblog XMLRPC API, and many more! LifeType is extensible via plugins, that will add new exciting features such as moblogging, integration with Flickr and Gallery2, shoutbox, and many more!
