Particle Blogger allows you to set up a blog in minutes just by entering your database settings and running the installer script. You can then begin blogging with automatic archiving of posts my month, categories (tags), an integrated RSS feed and the option to turn on static (search engine friendly) URLs. It also features a fully web based admin panel where you can make new posts and edit or delete old ones using a rich text environment and change the settings of your blog to adjust the title, description, amount of headlines displayed and many more options. Finally, Particle Blogger is fully skinable using .tpl files so you can easily put together a new template or edit the default one, working in simple HTML without it being cluttered by PHP code.
