Purepage is a COM component that allows you to create pure html pages that retain the look and feel of the original document as well as many options that give developers flexibility in design. Developers can use purepage to quickly and easily build powerful Web Publishing applications that give businesses the means to effectively deliver existing business documents to partners, customers and employees. It allows you to add powerful HTML export, conversion and reporting capabilities to your ASP Internet or Intranet applications, and dynamically create HTML documents from virtually any Windows document (including Microsoft Office files and many others). Its simple yet powerful COM interface can be used in any language that supports industry standard COM (including Visual Basic, Delphi, C++, Active Server Pages, Cold Fusion and more).
