SillySite is a simple web page design program. There are a limited number of built-in graphics and colors so that a person can quickly create a simple web page in a variety of "looks." When the user gets their page the way they like it, they can click a button and the program will email them the HTML page. You can choose colors for your page's background, text, and links and a "welcome" graphic to be displayed. You can type in more or less unlimited text, and even add up to 3 links to other sites you like. This was originally intended for students learning very basic HTML. They could see what their page would look like, then see the HTML code in the email. With slight modifications, this could be made to create pages on a site -- some members-only sites have done this.
