Wavtoreal is a small perl script for use with a console-based realproducer. This script asks you several options, you fill them in and then the real-audio-file is generated. Currently it's written only for wav-files, but it can be easily changed for movies and so on. The script asks for the following options: input file, output file, target audiences, audio format, info title, info author, info description, info copyright, allow recording, allow download and delete file or not.
