Having a mobile phone with a built in cam and email capability? Want to publish your thoughts and images from the top of the mountain you just climbed instantly to your website? Try KMB, my little MailBlogger Utility. It connects to a certain mailaccount, grabs Emails with a certain Subject, by which it identifies regular entries. It extracts the text and attached images and saves the text and the original images to a database and the filesystem respectively. It resizes the images to a standard size chosen. It also rotates the images if indicated in the Email. It keeps the original(rotated) one as well as the resized to allow a preview and a full view. Further Documentation inside the script! Have fun! Rev. 01/17/05: updated to version 0.45; supporting more devices
